

Update From the Home

Our CEO Jane reports that the boys continue to excel in every aspect of their lives, despite the economic difficulties. The staff remains steadfast in the mission to provide a nurturing and supportive environment.

How Are the Boys Doing?

The overall well-being of the children at Life4Kids Children's Home is positive. Their physical and emotional health remains stable, and they are engaged in many activities that contribute to their holistic development. All the credit goes to the staff.

The boys in primary and junior high school levels are progressing well with improvement in performance across key subjects.

Extracurricular participation remains high, with many of the boys involved in sports, music, and arts programs, fostering their talents and skills beyond the classroom.

The high school students are equally excelling.

Economic Challenges

The ongoing economic challenges in the country and the world at large, compounded by lack of stability in the Kenyan government, have presented difficulties in daily operations and increased the cost of living, impacting our budget and resource allocation. Despite these challenges, Life4Kids maintains the quality of care and education for the boys and continues to seek support from partners and sponsors to help navigate these challenging times.

What Can You Do?

When our supporters see how well the boys are doing, they often ask: "what can I do to help?" We have several areas of need: We need two sponsorships for boys ($185/month). We need funds to buy bicycles and sporting equipment for the boys. We need gently used clothing and shoes for boys aged 4-18. If you can help call 705.528.8787.

Trip to Kenya

Plans are progressing for the visit by thirteen supporters from the Midland area to Kenya at the end of October. Our mission is to build a library and computer lab in the home for the boys and to plants gardens.

Each traveller is paying for their own trip.

Message From Jane

Jane Wasike is CEO of Life4Kids in Kenya, and she writes:

"I would like to extend my deepest gratitude to our dear donors and partners. Your continued support and commitment are indispensable to our success and in achieving our shared vision. Thank you for choosing to share your love with the boys. Highlights of your impact include:

- (1) Ensuring that our children have access to quality education and healthcare; and*
- (2) Providing continuous support during times of economic hardship, ensuring that our operations continue without major disruptions."*
